Anna Porter concentrates her practice on litigation and enforcement matters relating to the financial services industry. She assists individuals and companies facing regulatory and enforcement matters, in arbitrations and in federal and state court litigation.

Committed to helping clients resolve complicated matters

Anna maintains an active pro bono practice, representing clients in civil rights actions as well as immigration proceedings, drawing on her experience working in the Immigrant and Workers' Rights group at Legal Aid Chicago during law school and as a paralegal at an immigration law office prior to law school. Anna is fluent in Spanish.

While in law school, Anna served as an articles editor for the University of Chicago Legal Forum. She also gained experience advocating for clients in the Federal Criminal Justice and Young Center for Immigrant Children's Rights clinics.
